A Wonderful Camping Experience

Last month, my classmates and I went camping at a beautiful hill near our town. We went there by bus early in the morning. Everyone was very excited.

When we arrived, we set up the tents together and prepared the campfire. After that, we cooked noodles for lunch. In the afternoon, we played some games and took many photos. The weather was sunny and fresh.

At night, we sat around the campfire, sang songs, and told funny stories. It was a wonderful moment. The stars shone brightly in the sky.

The next morning, we cleaned the area and packed our things. We went home happily and felt very tired but satisfied.

It was one of the best experiences I've ever had.

My First Day at Senior High School

Last July, I experienced my first day at senior high school. I woke up very early because I didn't want to be late. I wore my new uniform and felt both nervous and excited.

When I arrived at school, the teachers welcomed us warmly. We were divided into groups and joined some fun introduction games. I met many new friends, and we talked about our hobbies and favorite subjects.

After the activities, the principal gave a short speech about school rules and expectations. Then we took a short tour around the school. I really enjoyed exploring the classrooms, library, and school garden.

Before going home, I realized that high school would be a new and exciting chapter in my life. It was truly a memorable day.

Helping My Mother at Home

Last Sunday, I woke up early and decided to help my mother at home. She was busy cleaning the house, so I wanted to do something useful.

First, I helped her wash the dishes after breakfast. There were many plates and glasses, but we finished it quickly while talking and laughing together.

Next, I swept and mopped the floor. It was a little tiring, but the house looked clean and fresh afterward. Then I watered the plants in our garden. The flowers looked beautiful after getting some water.

Finally, my mother and I cooked lunch together. We made fried rice and some vegetables. It felt great to spend time with her and help her at the same time. That day, I learned that helping parents can be fun and rewarding.

A Visit to My Grandparents' House

During the last school holiday, my family and I visited my grandparents who live in the countryside. We left early in the morning and arrived there after a three-hour drive. I was very happy to see them again after a long time.

First, my grandmother served us her delicious homemade breakfast. We ate together and talked about many things. After that, I helped my grandfather feed his chickens and water the plants in the garden. It was simple, but I really enjoyed it.

Next, in the afternoon, my cousins and I went to the river near the house. We played in the water and skipped stones across the surface. We laughed a lot and took many photos together.

Before going home the next day, my grandparents gave us some fresh fruits and vegetables from their garden. I felt grateful for the warm and joyful time we spent together. It was a wonderful visit that I will always remember.

The Science Competition

Last semester, my school held a science competition for all students. I decided to join because science is my favorite subject. I felt both excited and nervous at the same time.

First, I prepared for the competition by studying every afternoon after school. I read my science book, watched videos, and asked my teacher about things I didn't understand. My best friend helped me practice answering questions quickly.

Next, on the day of the competition, all participants gathered in the school hall. The questions were quite difficult, but I stayed calm and focused. I tried my best to answer every question carefully.

Finally, the judges announced the results. I was so surprised and happy when my name was called as the second winner. My friends cheered for me, and my teacher congratulated me. It was one of the proudest moments of my life.

Trip to the Mountain

Last holiday, my family and I went to Mount Tangkuban Perahu in Bandung. We left home early in the morning to avoid traffic. The weather was cool and the sky was clear when we arrived.

First, we walked around the crater area and took many photos. The smell of sulfur was strong, but the view was very beautiful. My father told us the legend of Sangkuriang, which made the trip even more interesting.

Next, we bought some souvenirs from the local shops. I chose a wooden keychain and a warm hat. We also enjoyed some hot noodles and corn while sitting near the mountain view. It felt so relaxing.

Finally, before going home, we stopped by a tea plantation nearby. We took pictures among the green tea plants and breathed in the fresh air. It was a wonderful trip that I will never forget.

Our School Sports Day

Last Friday, my school held its annual Sports Day. All students were very excited because it was one of the most awaited events of the year. The field was decorated with colorful flags and balloons.

First, we started the day with a marching parade around the school. Each class wore matching uniforms and carried creative banners. The principal gave an opening speech, and everyone clapped cheerfully.

Next, the competitions began. I joined the 100-meter race and tug of war. The weather was hot, but we all gave our best. My class won the tug of war, and we shouted happily together.

Finally, in the afternoon, the teachers announced the winners of all the games. Our class got the second place overall. We were proud of our teamwork and spirit. It was truly a fun and memorable day.

A Funny Experience at the Market

Last Sunday, my mother asked me to buy some vegetables at the traditional market. I was happy to go because I wanted to help her. I brought a shopping bag and some money.

First, I went to the vegetable stall and bought carrots, tomatoes, and onions. Everything went well until I saw a fruit seller with bright red apples. I asked the price and decided to buy some. When I reached home, my mother laughed because the “apples” I bought were actually red potatoes!

Next, I returned to the market to exchange them. The seller smiled and said it was okay — she also laughed at my mistake. I bought the real apples this time and made sure they were not potatoes.

Finally, when I came home again, my family couldn’t stop laughing. I felt a bit embarrassed but also amused. It was a funny experience that I will never forget.

Helping My Friend with Her Project

Last week, my friend Sinta asked me to help her with an English project. She had to make a short video about daily routines, but she didn't know how to edit it. I agreed to help her after school.

First, we wrote the script together and practiced reading it aloud. We laughed many times because we made some funny mistakes while recording. After that, we finally got the perfect video after several tries.

Next, we moved to the computer lab to edit the video. I taught Sinta how to add subtitles and background music. She was very happy when she learned how easy it was. We finished everything just before sunset.

Finally, the next day, she presented the video in front of the class. Everyone liked it, and the teacher gave her a high score. Sinta thanked me, and I felt proud that I could help my friend succeed.

A School Trip to the Museum

Last month, my classmates and I went on a school trip to the city museum. We were very excited because it was our first trip of the semester. The teachers reminded us to behave well and take notes about what we saw.

First, when we arrived, a guide welcomed us and explained the history of the museum. We saw many ancient objects, such as traditional weapons, old coins, and historical photos. I was amazed by how well everything was preserved.

Next, we visited the art gallery inside the museum. There were many beautiful paintings and sculptures made by Indonesian artists. My friends and I took many photos, and our teacher helped us understand the meaning of some artworks.

Finally, before going home, we had lunch together in the museum garden. We shared our food, laughed, and talked about our favorite parts of the trip. It was a fun and educational experience that I will always remember.
